A number of old men in Louisville, formerly members of the Louisville Legion, have called upon Gen. Jno.
B. Castleman to organize a regiment of citizens for home guard duty.

British merchant vessels over 1,600 tons sunk by mine or submarine in the last week number 14, according to the official statement of the British admiralty. Two vessels over 1,600 tons and three fishing vessels also were sunk.

It has leaked out that recently there was a mutiny on four battleships of the German fleet at Wilhelmshaven, the captain of one of which was thrown overboard and drowned. The sailors later surrendered and a number of them are said to have been shot while others were sentenced to long terms of imprisonment.

Peace is impossible, according to a statement made by the imperial German chancellor, so long as Germany's opponents demand German soil or try to separate the people from their emperor. The German foreign secretary in an address to the reichstag asserted that there was no impediment to peace that could not be overcome by negotiations except the demand of France for the return of Alsace-Lorraine. Peace will come in due time and Germany will accept any terms she can get.

Sir Auckland Geddes, minister of national service, in a speech delivered at Nottingham, predicted that grim work of bombing German towns and villages would be in full swing "before many moons have elapsed." He said he wished it had been possible to avoid inflicting that punishment on women and innocent children in Germany, but that the brutal spirit ruling in Germany made it inevitable. This decision had been reached, the speaker added, reluctantly and not in any spirit of vengeance, but in pursuance of the inexorable law which life lays on every man: "Thou shalt protect thy women and children or perish."

BY THE HILL ROAD

By JEAN STUART.

The young woman, sitting on a log in the summer shade, was conscious that someone was coming up from the hill road, and that the bushes at the edge of the road had been parted. She saw that a man was looking out of the tangle.

"I beg your pardon, if I have disturbed you," he said courteously, removing his hat. "But I used to be familiar with—with this—some years ago, and I am trying to recall this place. It is so much changed that I can hardly realize it is the same."

The young woman followed the direction of his eyes. He was looking at a disordered heap that had once been a chimney, and at overthrown and rotting blocks of wood that had once been the pillars of a house.

"Time seems to have made many changes here," she said quietly, without any embarrassment. He looked around again, with a lingering glance, and sat down on the other end of the log.

"This is the remains of the house in which I was born," he said thoughtfully, after a silence. "It has been a long time since I saw it. Right about over there was my room. There was a rose vine over the window—my mother planted it—see—a wild branch of it is growing yet. And that old chimney! I couldn't realize that the old house would be gone when I came again. If you know what it means, I believe I have a headache because the old house has fallen down."

The girl's eyes rested softly on the decayed chimney.

"I was wondering before you came," she acknowledged, "if those who used to live here had forgotten all about the old home. I am merely a summer boarder over at Farmer Gray's, and have heard a little about—about you, I think—end of the others."

There was a long silence before he answered her.

"I found out early that I would go out and make my way in the world," he said. "I had hard work the first five years. But things began to come my way at last. I could build a beautiful home about this ruin if I wished—and I was thinking as I came out here that I would like to do that—but now —I am not so sure. I am afraid it would be the loneliest place in all the world—haunted with ghosts. Everything I ever loved here is gone."

"You speak, perhaps, of the dogs—or is it the cows and horses?" she asked.

"I spoke more especially," he said,
"of a tiny girl that I used to call my little sweetheart. Where is she now, I wonder? How the years rob us as they go!"

The girl turned and looked at him.
"But doubtless the years gave you far more than they took away," she said steadily. "One finds it that way in life. A man loses the baby sweetheart he thought he loved. Beg pardon—it is almost dinner time with the Grays, and I must go."

"But—wait a moment!" he cried, greatly perturbed, as she was going past him. "I asked—I asked again and again—and when I found that she was to be an heiress—and I was a mere drudge in a hardware house, with grimy hands and ill-fitting clothes, I did not ask again."

She had paused, the ruffled white sunbonnet hanging back from her face and framing it in.

"I have no doubt you have even forgotten how she looked," she said presently.

"She had a world of golden hair," he replied. "Her name was Elsie—and there was a dimple in each cheek when she laughed. Perhaps you have heard the Grays speak of her. They were fond of her once."

"Yes," she said, moving slowly toward the opening in the tangled brushwood. "I have heard them speak of her. She was adopted, as you say, and was educated, and had the world at her feet, one might say. And yet I heard—it seems to me that someone told me—she came back here not long ago—to look at the old home—and to cross the creek at the old place—"

He had one fleeting glimpse of her as she looked back at him from between the leaves. A flood of rosy color had swept over either cheek, and in the midst of the rose was a dimple.
A look of amazed comprehension flashed into his face—but before he could speak she was gone.

He had always been swift of foot, however—and besides—He knew the way to Farmer Gray's, and the way led across the little creek at the foot of the hill.

Useless Wishes.

"I wish I had not done it. I wish I had not said it." How often we hear and say these words. But of what use are they? Nothing was ever dragged back from the past by a wish that came afterward. It is the wish that comes before, and prompts us to be cautious, because we desire to do and say what is best, that is worth anything. Preventing is better than repenting, because preventing spares the repenting that is unable to recall the deed done, and the word spoken.

Bay Rum.

The basis of bay rum is Jamaica of St. Croix rum, made from the skimmings of the sugar boilers, the scrap-ings of sugar barrels, and the washings from sugar pots. For the best grade of bay rum the rum must be free from foreign odors and almost color-

CONSTIPATION

And Sour Stomach Caused This Lady Much Suffering. Black-Draught Relieved.

Meadowville, Ky.—Mrs. Pearl Patrick, of this place, writes: "I was very constipated. I had sour stomach and was so uncomfortable. I went to the doctor. He gave me some pills.
They weakened me and seemed to tear up my digestion. They would gripe me and afterwards it seemed I was more constipated than before."

I heard of Black-Draught and decided to try it. I found it just what I needed. It was an easy laxative, and not bad to swallow. My digestion soon improved. I got well of the sour stomach, my bowels soon seemed normal, no more griping, and I would take a dose now and then, and was in good shape.

I cannot say too much for Black-Draught for it is the finest laxative one can use."

Thedford's Black-Draught has for many years been found of great value in the treatment of stomach, liver and bowel troubles. Easy to take, gentle and reliable in its action, leaving no bad after-effects, it has won the praise of thousands of people who have used it.

Physical Courage in War.

Nearly always physical courage results from a comparative lack of perception. It leaves out many considerations, some of them important. In wartime it finds justification in its generosity. To the cause it is working for it freely gives all that it has behind it, including love of life itself.
It actually seems to court death.
With joy it takes the road of sacrifice.
For this reason it must always be beautiful. And with it there must go a marvellous exhilaration, like a spiritual intoxication. When it reveals itself in mass courage, multitudes of men exposing themselves for the same cause, it must open up the profoundest depths of emotion.

WRECKED THE RESTAURANT

irate Patron Was Sorry After It Was Over and Offered to Replace All the Demolished Crockery.

The Little Daisy restaurant in Harlem was wrecked and the man who did the job is sorry and promises to be a patron for life of the place of eats, says a New York news letter. The wrecker was going in for the great American record for the standing or sitting soup dive.
He had almost finished his exhibition of barbaric sports when he found a gold tooth in the soup. When the man's testimony was doubted he proceeded to throw the equipment of the restaurant, propelled by the proprietor, into the street.

Of course that kind of exercise called for the guest's arrest, and just as he was being carted off he put his tongue in his cheek and turned white. "Gosh!" said the prisoner, "that was my own gold tooth I lost." The proprietor of the restaurant looked at the patron right between the eyes, and the patron in return looked as bashful as all get out. He explained that he was sorry as any diner need ever become, and that he gladly would replace all of the late crockery and apologize to any group of persons suggested by the owner of the Little Daisy. Furthermore, he would eat at the Little Daisy restaurant for the rest of his natural life. The proprietor, after contemplating his guest for some time and thinking intently, withdrew all charges. A dentist closed the inci-

ARTIFICIAL MILK.

A process has recently been patented for the manufacture of artificial milk. The chief constituents besides water are bleached meal made from nuts, sugar and potassium phosphate. The solution is first boiled, and is afterward treated in a vacuum pan. Lactic bacteria are then introduced to give the necessary degree of acidity, and the milk is pasteurized for 20 minutes at a temperature of about 150 degrees Fahrenheit. The final operation is the stirring in of a minute percentage of citric acid. The inventor claims that milk made in this way can be condensed, or dried and powdered, as in the case of the natural product, while cream may be formed by the addition of nut fat when the milk is in the vacuum pan.—Chambers' Journal.

ITS STATUS.

Saving His Feelings.

Lavern had a favorite plate, from which she always liked to eat. One day her father accidentally broke it.
He had to tell the bad news to his little daughter, and was so penitent that her love for the plate was overshadowed by sorrow for him, and she said: "Oh, that's all right, papa. I was going to break that myself yesterday."

MONEY

In every community there is enough money in hiding to start a respectable bank.

This money is not only liable to be lost by theft or fire, but it is placed where it does not bring in any income to the holder—neither is it of any use to the public.

Deposit this "dead" money with us. Then it will get into circulation and be of some benefit to yourself and also to the community.

The more money there is in circulation, the cheaper the rate of interest; the easier it is to borrow, and the more prosperous the general business conditions.
